In modern society, access to clean water is necessary for sustaining life. Despite its abundant presence on Earth, the quality of available water can vary significantly, with some sources contaminated or lacking proper sanitation. Therefore, ensuring safe drinking water is an excellent public health priority. In regions where access to clean water is limited, the impact on health can be significant, leading to widespread diseases and mortality. Addressing these challenges requires global cooperation and investment in infrastructure to mitigate the consequences of insufficient or contaminated water sources, especially in regions where water quality remains insignificant in public policy agendas.
